ACTION JOSHUA TREE: JOSAR 2019 Design to the Rescue

Most people have a great time when they visit Joshua Tree National Park, however there’s always a few who get into serious trouble. Joshua Tree Search and Rescue (JOSAR) is the group that comes to their aid. Traditionally staffed by volunteers, JOSAR is now transitioning to a more professional organization as record numbers of visitors have resulted in record numbers of searches. In order to support this critical work, OTIS will come to the aid of the rescuers by providing creative solutions. The goal of this class will be to work with JOSAR to learn what they do and what they need and together produce a creative outcome. Students will have the opportunity to work directly with JOSAR and park staff, and learn basic search and rescue skills in the field.

Instructor: Rebecca Lowry
Partner: Joshua Tree National Park
This is a traveling class. It is mandatory that students remain on-site for the duration of the class. Two preliminary classes on campus and two follow-up classes are also required. The class will meet at Joshua Tree March 17-23 (Spring Break). Housing will be provided. Other classes will meet January 14, and three additional Mondays.
